CONFERENCE

Innovating Higher Education for Sustainable Development across the SADC: Innovation for Impact

21-23 May 2025 | Radisson Blu Lusaka | Zambia

SECOND ANNOUNCEMENT

You are invited to the First Southern African Regional Universities Association (SARUA) Conference taking place from 21–23 May 2025, in Lusaka, Zambia. This conference represents a critical moment for higher education in the Southern African Development Community (SADC) region.

Context

The conference theme, 'Innovating Higher Education for Sustainable Development across the SADC: Innovation for Impact', reflects the urgency of adapting education systems to support economic growth, regional integration and sustainable development. In a rapidly changing global environment, higher education institutions must respond proactively to economic, technological and social shifts. The conference will address these challenges and foster collaboration among university leaders, academics, policymakers, industry players and civil society organisations, ensuring that higher education in SADC evolves to meet future needs.

A key theme of the conference is the need for collaboration across sectors, i.e. that universities, governments, industries and civil society organisations must work together to address complex societal challenges through innovation. SADC universities must move beyond siloed approaches and build multi-disciplinary and cross-border partnerships. Collaborative efforts enhance research impact, improve policy relevance and ensure that higher education serves its mission towards regional social and economic empowerment. Partnerships with the private sector are especially crucial to bridge the gap between academe and the society into which it is embedded.

Why the conference is critical

- Addressing multiple regional challenges through higher education to facilitate dialogue on how to transform these limitations into opportunities, ensuring that higher education becomes a driver of social change, economic development, and geo-political regional cohesion.
- Promoting regional integration and cooperation as a cohesive higher education system is critical to regional integration, a priority for the SADC.
- Innovation as a key to sustainable development rethinking traditional models of education to ensure expansion, accessibility, relevance, and quality and thus repositioning higher education as hubs of innovation.
- Fostering leadership and governance in higher education to face increasingly complex demands, balancing academic excellence with financial sustainability and community engagement.
- Aligning higher education with the SDGs and regional priorities through showcasing good practices and promoting knowledge exchange, the event will demonstrate how universities can integrate sustainability principles into their operations and curricula.

Expected outcomes of the conference

The SARUA Conference aims to produce actionable outcomes that will guide the transformation of higher education in the SADC region:

- Best-practice models for curriculum innovation, leadership development, and regional collaboration
- Frameworks for quality assurance and digital transformation in education
- Recommendations for aligning higher education strategies with SDGs
- Strengthened regional partnerships to promote teaching, learning, research, engagement and innovation
- Policy suggestions for government officials and education ministries to support higher education reform

The conference will also inform SARUA's future initiatives and contribute to building a sustainable higher education ecosystem in Southern Africa. These recommendations will be further discussed and formalized during SARUA's Annual General Meeting (AGM), held on the final day of the conference.

Conclusion

The SARUA Conference comes at a critical time for the SADC region. As the world becomes more interconnected and social-economic spaces increasingly reliant on knowledge and innovation, higher education must play a central role in shaping the future of Southern Africa. This event will catalyse new ideas, foster collaboration, and embolden the universities to transform into engines of economic growth, social cohesion, and sustainable development.

By engaging university leaders, policymakers, academics, and industry representatives, the conference aims to unlock the potential of higher education to contribute to a more equitable, integrated, and sustainable future for the SADC region. The discussions and partnerships that emerge from this event will have lasting implications for how universities operate and collaborate across borders, ensuring that higher education systems remain relevant and resilient in the face of future challenge.
